

let the madness begin ...

...comes from the speakers, and one of the most charismatic figures of rock music stumbles across the stage to make his fans going nuts.

Metal-Grandpa, the evil incarnate, the madman, however you may call Ozzy Osbourne, he is a living legend. As lead singer of Black Sabbath in the late 1960ies, he was one of the founders of Heavy Metal as it is today.

Many bands would not have come into existence in that way if there hadn't been the wild, mysterious songs of the "Sab Four".

"OZZMOSIS", a band from Magdeburg(Saxony-Anhalt, Germany), convincingly presents the magic of the Madman in more than 100 minutes of a fantastically real show. Between "Bark At The Moon", "Mr. Crowley", "No More Tears" and of course "Paranoid" the OZZ-manic founds himself in an extraordinary OZZ-party in which the protagonists kick the shit out of everyone with their "Tribute To OZZ".

The guy on the Mad-Mic, alias "Ozzy's Little Helper", must have caught a tremendous amount of insanity to be able to present the Prince Of Darkness' Legions such a show. Shows as special guest at Doro Pesch Gigs, featuring Axel Rudi Pell, Blaze Bailey, ex- Iron Maiden were described by the German Metal-Magazine "Rockhard" as "outstanding performance, vocally as well as visually extremely Ozzy-like".

So let the madness begin and the band conquer the stage.
